

Wanapitei Pioneer two week program

This is a 9 day whitewater canoe trip. While in camp your child will learn the basic skills they need for this canoe trip. Once on trip they will continue to develop these new whitewater skills. No whitewater experience is needed prior to this canoe trip. Every day the group will pack up camp and move down river. A normal day will involve shooting a few sets of whitewater, portaging around sets of whitewater that are too difficult, and paddling down river on flat-water sections. Food will be prepared by the trip leaders before the group leaves on trip. Each day the meals will be assembled by the group. Some of these meals include pancakes, pasta salads, and pizza! Though the route and food are predictable, the weather is not. It is extremely important that when coming up to camp your child is prepared for weather extremes, this means rain and sun. Please remember that campers carry their own gear into camp when they arrive at our parking lot, we do help with some of the heavier loads (for those arriving by bus) but it is a 1km portage into camp. If you are driving your campers to camp you and your child will be carrying the load into camp.

Notes on clothing

Investing in gear at this age is a tough call. It is always good to have the best when out in the wilderness. However, we understand that while children are growing clothes have a short lifespan. Therefore we recommend you buy mid price range items.

Rain suit – Your rain jacket must be waterproof. Breathable is highly recommended, though not imperative. A rain jacket is a good place to invest some money if your child has done the bulk of their growing. Rain pants are usually worn during the day when raining and at night to keep dry while on the camp site if it is raining. Campers could conceivably be in their rain gear all day and evening depending on the weather. Breathability for rain pants is recommended though not highly. Rubber rain pants are sufficient.

Shirts, Pants, Sweaters, Long Johns - Cotton on trip is cumbersome and at times dangerous. When wet it uses the body's heat to dry itself causing the person wearing it to become colder. Thus we ask that your child does not bring cotton on trip. We recommend that your child bring clothes made of quick dry or wicking materials. These clothes dry fast and keep your child warm. Good materials to look out for are fleece for sweaters, merino wool or polypropylene for long johns and shirts, and quick dry material for shorts and pants. These rules about cotton apply to socks as well. Wool and Smart Wool are good sock materials, again please no cotton socks for canoe trip. It is important to remember that there will be varied summer weather and temperatures, so you must prepare both possibilities.

Notes on gear

Sleeping bag - Though down sleeping bags pack smaller, we believe that it is more practical for this age group to purchase a synthetic bag. It is cheaper, and dries faster.

Sleeping pad - Sleeping pads should be tested out at the store for comfort, length etc. Ensolite pads are cheaper but less comfortable. While Thermarest style pads are more comfortable and keep body warmer they are more expensive. We recommend that, if your child will be returning to camp for a few summers to invest in a Thermarest.

Backpack – While clothes are quickly grown out of at this age, a good backpack can last a long time. Invest in something sturdy rather than with many “bells and whistles”. The backpack should be able to hold all of the items on the Essentials for Canoe Trip lists (sleeping bag and pad optional). This is around the 65 L range of pack. Size, durability, and comfort are the biggest priorities. Remember campers carry their personal packs on portages, it should be comfortable. Dry Bags and backpacks are normally measured in liters hence the 65L (liter) reference above.

Dry bags - The dry bag will go inside your child’s personal backpack and keep their things dry if their pack gets wet. There are many different dry bags on the market. The only essential thing to keep in mind is that the bag should say that it is waterproof. After that your personal budget is the main criteria in what dry bag you purchase.

Whitewater Paddle - This will be a whitewater canoe trip mainly thus your child will need a whitewater canoe paddle. A midrange paddle can be easily purchased at MEC. A decent whitewater paddle usually has a carbon shaft and strong plastic blade. The cheapest option, and a good option for those children who are unsure about returning to camp, is a paddle with an aluminum shaft and plastic blade.

Flat-water Paddle- This paddle should be made from a wood material, and can be fitted at the retailer where purchased. If you have a paddle of your own, for a rough fit the handle of a paddle when vertical should nestle in the armpit of the paddler or between the nose and chin, whichever is more comfortable. Paddles can also be rented at camp.

Whitewater Helmet – There are many different types of whitewater helmets. A midrange helmet is fine for this trip. The fit must be a snug and it must have a good chin strap. A cycling helmet will not do.

PFD (life jacket) - It is imperative that the PFD is in top condition and has excellent floatation. The proper size and floatation can be determined where purchased. We ask that for whitewater canoe trips, a paddling vest be purchased as your PFD. This type of PFD allows for optimal mobility while paddling and also efficient swimming in whitewater if and when you dump.
